Butternut Squash

Grown just 37 miles from here!

2016-612-Celery-CNF-DOD-MW-FA

From a young age Tyler knew he wanted to be a farmer. In 1997 he and his wife Karla purchased land to support Tyler's dream of growing fruits, vegetables and flowers for the local community. They first started out selling their harvest from a picnic table they set up on their front lawn. Now they own 300 acres, with 100 acres dedicated solely to potato crops and sell their products at their farm stand and to grocery stores throughout the northeastern states. The farm hosts an annual apple festival and "pick-your-own" produce seasons. The Young Family Farm donates hundreds of thousands of pounds of produce to the Rhode Island Food Bank each year to support the community.

Butternut squash grows on vines. Australians refer to this winter squash as "butternut pumpkin."

Like carrots, butternut squash is packed with vitamin A which is good for your eyesight!

Butternut squash has a sweet and nutty flavor.
